Override benefits Fairfax City

Congress, in overriding President Reagan's veto of a supplemental appropriations bill last week, approved a measure to pay Fairfax City $41,000 in legal fees arising from a CIA break-in at a photo studio 11 years ago.

After the 1971 break-in was disclosed in 1975, the studio's operator filed a $12 million damage lawsuit against Fairfax City, charging its police department had cooperated with the CIA in the raid. Although the suit was dismissed five years ago, the city has argued the federal government should reimburse its legal expenses. Congress authorized payment in 1979, but appropriated no funds.

But Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., added the funds to the appropriations bill that originally passed the House on July 29.
